

What are you getting for your money?

When you compare software solution quotes, make sure it's apples to apples. Spruce doesn't charge you for each application on a specific PC. Payables and Receivables are included without requiring separate licensing and updates from a third party software solution with a different look, feel, and learning curve. In fact, SpruceWare.NET seat licensing is simple. You sign up for a specified number of seats, and within that number of logins, every user can be given security access to every listed SpruceWare.NET module in every branch location, and they may log in at any PC. There is no limit to the number of PCs or thin clients you can load SpruceWare.NET client software on, no matter what your seat license. We won't force you into high-priced, zero-flexibility hardware options either.

What's this mean in the real world? Consider this: when you leave your office and you want to look at a customer's aging from the sales floor, will you be blocked because the station isn't licensed for A/R? If your main A/R person's PC breaks down, will that person find it's impossible to post payments and run statements from another available PC? And if you need to run statements this week because your office manager is on vacation, will you have to learn a whole new software package to do it?

That's just Accounts Receivable. How will you feel when you can't take some Point of Sale overflow at your desk, or when you want to take advantage of a lull in your Florida visit to catch up on some work from your spouse's laptop but you realize you can't use it because it's never been licensed by your nickel-and-dime supplier?

Take a deep, cleansing breath. It's all just a bad dream. You can get SpruceWare.NET.
